WHY POLITICS, LAW AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA?

- Most classes average about 20 to 30 students. This means you will never feel like you are just a name or a number in a large class. In addition, faculty members take the time to meet with each student every semester to advise them and discuss personal and career goals. We also give you the first hand experience that will make a difference in your future. Many professors include students in their research projects and encourage students to present their own works at national and regional conferences. We also offer several politically-related student clubs, departmental scholarships, internships to help make your dreams a reality. We want you to succeed and will spend the time to make that happen.

FACULTY EXPERTISE

- In this Department, you will never take a class that is taught by a graduate student. Not only do all of the professors in the department have their doctorates, they are all active in their fields. They publish scholarly articles and books, and have been seen in the discipline’s top journals such as: Presidential Studies Quarterly, Journal of Environmental Law and Litigation, Review of Metaphysics, Policy Research Quarterly, The University of Memphis Law Review, Journal of Comparative European Politics, Peace Review, and Review of International Studies.

AN EXCEPTIONAL UNIVERSITY EXPERIENCE

- The University of Louisiana is an exceptional experience at an exceptional value. UL is able to provide a first class education with an exceptionally low student tuition. In addition, we offer students the full college experience with Division I athletics, a beautiful campus filled with live oaks, a cypress swamp in the center of the university, and an unbeatable Cajun and Creole culture that makes it the hub of arts, entertainment, leisure activities, and academic pursuits in the greater Acadiana area.

DEPARTMENTAL MISSION STATEMENT

The Department of Political Science shares the core values and principles of the University of Louisiana at Lafayette and its College of Liberal Arts: excellence in undergraduate and graduate education, in research, and in public service. Because of our smaller department, we can focus on a select group of the University of Louisiana’s official strategic imperatives: “enhancing student engagement and success, facilitating quality teaching and learning, and preparing our students to thrive as global citizens.” Our top priority—in addition to teaching advanced reading, writing, and critical thinking skills—is to provide the foundational knowledge, critical awareness and fundamental skills necessary for both national and global citizenship. In short, the Department of Political Science shares and advances the goals of the larger University community and the state of Louisiana, especially the goal of promoting a flourishing civil society.
